DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 3-32 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Peake et al. (US Pat. No. 6,728,289 B1).

Regarding claims 3, 12, 15-17, 25 and 28-32, Peake et al. teaches a device comprising: a device structure, having a height z and an aperture (VCSEL), including an active layer (1708, 1808, 1908, 2008) (see figs. 17-20), and upper and lower DBR (1706, 1710, 1810, 1806, 1906, 1910, 2006, and 2010) (see figs. 17-20); contacts (col. 9, lines 10-15); a layer having a non-planar surface (102) (col. 5, lines 57-65); and a light emission property (i.e. refractive index) that varies within the aperture and the light output is in spatially fixed modes (see col. 7, lines 2-4 and col. 8, lines 30-38).

Regarding claim 4, Peake et al. teaches that the refractive index has a lengthscale on the order of the lasing wavelength (col. 8, lines 52-55).

Regarding claim 5, Peake et al. teaches a substrate having a first side adjacent to the lower DBR (see col. 8, lines 46-48).

Art Unit: 2815

Regarding claims 6-7, 9, 11, 14, 19-20, 22, 24, and 27, Peake et al. teaches that the non-planar layer is a texturing layer (col. 4, lines 42-46). See col. 7, lines 43-46 and col. 11, lines 60-66 and col. 12, lines 30-37. Furthermore, with regards to the process steps of patterning or polishing described in the claims, Applicant should noted that such limitations contain method of making characteristics given no patentable weight in determining patentability of the final device structure. Note that a "product by process" claim is directed to the product per se, no matter how actually made, In re Brown, 173 USPQ 685; In re Luck, 177 USPQ 523; In re Fessmann, 180 USPQ 324; In re Avery, 186 USPQ 161; In re Wertheim, 191 USPQ 90 (209 USPQ 554 does not deal with this issue); In re Marosi et al, 218 USPQ 289; and particularly In re Thorpe, 227 USPQ 964, all of which make it clear that it is the patentability of the final product per se which must be determined in a "product by process" claim, and not the patentability of the process, and that an old or obvious product produced by a new method is not patentable as a product, whether claimed in "product by process" claims or not. Note that applicant has the burden of proof in such cases, as the above case law makes clear.

Regarding claims 8, 10, 13, 18, 21, 23 and 26, Peake et al. teaches that the non-planar layer is a layer within at least one of the upper or lower DBR (see col. 8, lines 22-24).

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 3-32 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground of rejection.
